There's something about your house," remarked a venerable old customer recently, "that is conspicuously missing in others. I don't know of a prettier store anywhere—such fine goods, such immense variety. It's an ideal furniture house. I almost said a department store, you keep so many things. You deserve the great success you enjoy. You are honest in our advertising. You describe everything as it is, and, what's more, you are never 'just out' when a person calls for an advertised article."
